WHAT COTTON IS DOING FOR US.

Many reliable estimates set down the cotton crop of the United States this year at the high figures of 3,500,000 bales. It is coming to market much earlier than usual. The receipts at Southern ports are 550,000 bales (in round numbers) in advance of the receipts of last and other average years to the same date. So far have been the arrivals at Charleston, Savannah, Mobile, and New Orleans, that species has been shipped from New York to the South to buy bolls on England more cheaply than they can be had here. The price is satisfactory. And considering the condition of Europe, peace everywhere; prosperity in Germany, Ireland, Spain, and other countries which have often lately been in the deepest distress; a large accumulation of money at the financial centres; a fair prospect that new markets for European manufacturers will be opened in China, Japan, British Columbia, and elsewhere; there is no reason to expect that the price will decline.

An article published some months back in this journal, we showed that in that most active commercial year in the United States ever knew, 1856, the cotton of the South was our chief stand by and set off against the enormous consumption of foreign goods in the great cities and throughout the country. But for the copious supply of cotton, and high price it commanded, the United States would have incurred a debt to the foreign world which it would have taken years to discharge.

It seems now that the cotton crop is going to be the means of setting the trade of the country on its legs again. Our other great staple—breadstuffs—is in an unpromising condition. Excellent harvests have been the rule throughout Europe, and the price of all kinds of breadstuffs, so low that it is estimated that a loss of at least a million of dollars has been incurred by the parties who sent breadstuffs to New York this fall. At present rates, and they are likely to be unchanged for some months, flour and wheat cannot be sent abroad and sold so as to repay the producer in the West.

Our cotton on the contrary, if the crop fulfills present expectations, will not only nobly reward the planter, but will go along way toward liquidating the debt we are incurring to Europe for dry goods and foreign manufactures. More than this: the early receipts at the Southern ports, by suggesting shipments of specie from New York, have given trade the first wholeness impetus it has had since the reversion. The four or five million of specie we have sent to the South were worse than useless in our bank vaults here. In the South they will be eminently useful. They will generate and feed traffic throughout the whole Southern country, and coming back to us, as they will by various channels through the South and West, they will, on their journey, serve usefully to restore credit and foster wholesome commercial enterprise. The revival of trade will therefore be dated from the early fall receipts of cotton from the South, and the movement in specie which they occasioned.—Harpers.

CURING OF HAMS AND BACON.—It is simply to use the same quantity of common soda as saltpetre—one ounce and a half of each to the fourteen pounds of ham or bacon, using the usual quantity of salt. The soda prevents the hardness in the lean of the bacon which is so often found, and keeps it quite mellow all through, besides being a preventive of rancid.

In accounting for a room-mate's bad habit, an exchange says—

"Ministers' sons get so familiar with good words that they are apt to handle them carelessly."

Does this explain the well-known proverb—"Too much of one thing is good for nothing?"

A shrewd old gentleman once said to his daughter,—

"Be sure my dear, you never marry a poor man, but remember that the poorest man in the world is one that has money and nothing else."

One of the neatest replies ever heard in a legislative body, or anywhere else, was lately made by Mr. Tilson, of Rockland, Maine. A member had replied to something Mr. Tilson said, and pausing a moment, he inquired if he saw the line of argument.

"Mr. Speaker," said he, in answer to the gentleman, I hear the hum of the wheel, but cannot see any thread."

Plain honesty is the very best kind of politeness, and temperance the best physician.
